Health Issues

Health issues associated with sports equipment have been a concern since the advent of protective wear. One fundamental reason for this has been the lack of an effective cleaning method for the equipment. Left unclean the leather, fabric and foam can become contaminated with sweat, mucus, blood and dirt resulting in an ideal environment for bacteria, yeast and mold to grow. These organisms may cause serious infection for the athlete.

This is the same high-tech system used by the San Jose Sharks!

Our process takes advantage of its patented waterless approach to reduce and eliminate harmful pathogens.

Why should this be done every season?

Protective pad equipment utilized in sports, such as hockey gear, requires professional cleaning. The intense sweat produced by the athletes’ results in the equipment becoming unbearably “smelly” and contaminated with sweat. This smell is caused by the decay of mold, yeast, bacteria, and fungus that grows in the pads. Left uncleaned, this could pose a serious health risk to the athlete.
